

This collage is supposed to represent American culture, and the focus was truths and dreams. The top of the collage shows truths, the violence and oppression that people escape in other places but also the injustice they find here. The bottom shows the hope and dreams people have to make a life here. The two parts are connected with a butterfly, which represents that American culture is having the freedom to acknowledge the ugly truths and dream of improving and fighting to make change.